The scent slump in copper stor socialy that of the Amalgamate per company, has been attributed by the netropolits press, both in the cast and in the Pacific coast, to a large prespect of a dontinued overproduct of the metal. The cry of a "large sumulation" of copper to the Cuited sabse sremed to have troubled the minds of a great many people inter osted in copper and copper stocks, and to have caused even ordinarily shrewd es men and ingestors to be influoed by it to their financial detriment. It is quite possible that cupper stocks had been forced to a fictitious value, especially the Amalgamated copper, and that it was comparatively easy for the stock gamblers to cause a decline In that stock, carrying with it naturally other prominent copper stocks. However, no attempt seems to have been made to force down the price of the refined product, although had the took manipulators believed to their ery of "overproduction" and "large ulation" they would certainly have attacked the price of copper, with a good show of success and the conse-quent certainty of a decline in the species. The condition of the copper market and of the visible supply or hand has not at any time warranted the belief in any meterial reduction in the price of copper, within any reasonmenutacturers using copper extensivey have allowed themselves to be influenced by the cry of a surplus and prob-able consequent reduction in the price, and have been in the market as purobseers only as their immediate our rent requirements demanded, yet the present stock of copper in the hands of the United Metals Selling company, which holds or controls all the 'accumulated" supply of copper in this country, will scarce more than furnish the quantity to be required by the cale to the Philippines, while both Engand and France are again to our man the for more copper, fully realising the inutility of hoping for a decline in price. The latest advices from that show a material reduction in

To readers of eastern journals the publication of the statement of the opition of members of the family of the late ex-President Harrison to the enting by congress of a pension of 5,000 per annum to the widowed Mrs. Harrison will seem strange. A like ion has been granted in the cases of Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Garfield, and doubtless will be in the case of Mrs. McKinley, although she has been awarded an annual allowance of $8,000 side this she possessed at the time of his death a separate estate, which she inherited, and which is estimated at over $100,000. Ex-President Harrison ried, for the second time, rather tale in life and to a woman much younger than himself. Nothing could possibly be said derogatively of the character or social standing of Mrs. Harrison, but Mr. Harrison's children, and other relatives, were very much duced for this opposition, so far as can day morning to say something to the be learned from published statements president about the management of the matter, is that Mr. Harrison affairs in Arizona, and especially in rewards president when he contracted spect of the office of the secretary of the territory.
